

the calamities of which the the victims of last Spring have justly voked the horror & indignation of Europe and excited to deep interest in their fate & condition. the English people true to their national traditions and their principles of liberty, justice and humanity have taken on this occasion as our many others shrou themselves the griefs of the oppressed and the sympathies with the suffering. Whatever may be the result of the present crisis which is approaching its present solution the Bulg. will never forget etc.

The Bulgarians ^{being} the objects of interest & sympathy, as I have said, it occurred to my mind, that a lecture on their history preceded by a brief sketch of their rising in the 19th cent. will be both interesting and useful.
