

1871

For a number of years I have been engaged in the study of the history of the United States and particularly of the early years of the Republic. I have been fortunate in obtaining access to
many of the original
documents and manuscripts which have been preserved
in the various
archives and libraries of the country. I have also had the opportunity of consulting with many of the leading historians of the country and have been able to verify many of the facts which I have presented in my work.
